

Puerto Ricans march for independence

Escrito por USAToday

Martes, 24 de Junio de 2014 22:24 - Última actualización Martes, 24 de Junio de 2014 23:05

Hundreds gathered Sunday morning in San Juan, Puerto Rico, in support of independence from the United States. Your Take top contributor Dan Eidsmoe was on the scene as several groups marched.

Protesters carried Puerto Rican flags as they marched through Ashford Avenue, Eidsmoe reports. A flier for the protest read, "Puerto Rico needs independence as the first step to organize a prosperous country with social justice and sovereignty, which will permit us to have fair and equal relationship with all countries in the world."

Marchers blocked the street for around 30 minutes, according to Eidsmoe.

Protesters block Ashford Avenue in San Juan during a June 22 protest for Puerto Rican independence. (Photo: Dan Eidsmoe, Your Take)

Demonstrators hold a sign for Movimiento Unión Soberanista, a Puerto Rican political party.

Puerto Ricans march for independence

Escrito por USAToday

Martes, 24 de Junio de 2014 22:24 - Última actualización Martes, 24 de Junio de 2014 23:05

David Estess, a member of the Puerto Rican political party, "Partido Nacionalista de Puerto Rico," is seen participating in the march.

David Estess, a member of the Puerto Rican political party, "Partido Nacionalista de Puerto Rico," is seen participating in the march.

David Estess, a member of the Puerto Rican political party, "Partido Nacionalista de Puerto Rico," is seen participating in the march.